TEACHING SYSTEM

The CODECS courses are taught through a multi-media system. All classes involve student works: the classes have a set of study books, experimental work, audio-visual materials and tutorials. Attendance at the Residential School is compulsory for all courses. An external examiner is appointed for each class.

ASSESSMENT

Students are being assessed through diverse means, including:

a) Continuous Evaluation

Class performance is assessed through a number of written tests that may be:

- Tests graded/assessed by the tutor (LNT) and/or
- Computer graded tests (LNC) are made from a series of questions for which students have to select the correct answer from a series of given answers (multiple choice). These works are corrected through a digital procedure.

The tests may be formative or summative: formative tests are established only for learning purposes, summative tests are those tests that are being used for assessment as well as for learning. The details concerning the general means of the tests and exam performance are shown in the transcript of records with the final result for each subject.

b) Assessment portfolio – based on the record of the ability resulting from the assessments.

c) Examinations – the examinations are the written assessment at the end of the course.
